

REMARKS

A self-evident grammatical error has been corrected in paragraph 262 of the specification.

At this point, the specification has been revised in three amendments, namely the 13 June 2002 Amendment to Text, the Amendment submitted 14 January 2004, and the present amendment, using the two different formats prescribed at the times of those amendments for revising the specification of a U.S. patent application. To facilitate printing of the patent which issues on the above application, enclosed is a substitute specification which incorporates all of the specification revisions made in the three amendments. The page numbers of the substitute specification begin with the letter "S" to help distinguish the substitute specification from the specification as originally filed.

Pursuant to 37 CFR 1.125(b), Applicant's Attorney states that the accompanying substitute specification contains no new matter. Accordingly, the substitute specification should be entered.

Also enclosed is a marked-up version of the specification annotated in accordance with 37 CFR 1.125(c) to indicate all the specification changes.

The specification uses underlining for the specification's headings and sub-headings and for the names of journals, books, and the like. In order for the marked-up specification to be clear as to what has been revised in the paragraphs of the specification, the underlining of the names of journals, books, and the like has been deleted, and those names have instead been presented in italics. The underlining of the headings and sub-headings has been retained since that underlining will not create any significant unclarity in the specification and will likely be deleted when the patent is printed.

Please telephone Attorney for Applicant at 650-964-9767 if there are any questions.
